An announcement, which though unofficial sounds authentic, coming through press dispatches from Washington, to the effect that the Senate's consideration of the World Court resolution with attached Root formula, is to be postponed for some little time, will be received with general approval from that great majority of the American people which believes that it is the first duty of our Congress at this time to deal with problems which are vitally affecting the welfare of the American people at home.

The World Court resolution got off to a poor start in the Senate Foreign Relations committee. The resolution, proposed by Senator Reed and unanimously adopted by the committee, to the effect that is the belief of the Senate that the Court, under the Root formula shall not render any advisory opinion in a matter in which Uncle Sam has an interest, without the consent of the United States, was the immediate reason for the fact that the Court resolution got off to a poor start. There was an immediate disagreement as to whether this resolution was a reservation to the World Court Resolution, with the force and effect of Reservation Five, or whether it was an innocuous affair, merely outlining the opinion and belief of the United States Senate.

While Senator Reed said that he did not believe it had the force of a reservation, but was merely a clarifying resolution, Senator Borah expressed the opinion that it was a reservation and would have to be passed on by the powers who go to make up the World Court. As the powers had already rejected the same sentiment, as expressed in Reservation Five, passed by the Senate a few years ago, it became evident that if Senator Reed's resolution is a reservation, the World Court adherence of Uncle Sam is junked again unless the European nations have changed their minds about Reservation Five.

The debate over the Reed resolution came fast and furious and finally it became apparent that the friends of American adherence to the World Court were out on uncharted seas again with every prospect of running into foul weather. As friends of the Court in the Senate became more and more concerned, enemies of American adherence began to show greater and greater expressions of delight. Finally they came to the conclusion that they would be able to stop the Court resolution in the Senate if the whole venture did not become hopelessly entangled in the maze of debate over the Reed resolution and so die a natural death.

Latest information is to the effect that the friends of the Court believe that the time is not now "propitious" for reporting out the World Court resolution. Expressions to this effect are said to have been given by Senator Walsh of Montana and Senator Robinson of Arkansas. Opponents of the World Court resolution declare that the time is "propitious" for them but that they will not insist on reporting it out, since such a procedure would be

The Campbell high school operetta, "The Magic Maker," is being rehearsed daily, and is shaping up into what may be the finest presentation ever offered by the school, is the word received from A. A. Thielke, musical director of the production.

All of the cast are working hard to make the vehicle a success, and Muriel Carson, dramatic coach, announces that the characters are well suited to their parts.

The production is to be staged Friday night, April 15 at the grammar school auditorium beginning at 8 o'clock. Tickets may be purchased from any junior student or at the door. Exchange may be made for reserved seats.

Congregational Guild
Enjoys St. Patrick
Party Recently

Editor's note: This item was received too late for last week's issue of the Press.

The Harriet Windsor group of the Guild entertained the other sections of the organization at a very enjoyable social afternoon on St. Patrick's day in the Congregational church.

Having named their group after the founder of the Guild, the Reverend Windsor's wife, the ladies had made that worthy woman the subject of part of their program.

Mrs. Mary Lanphear in a few introductory words told of their choice of a group name and announced that Mrs. Shaw would read a poem written about Mrs. The poem was written by Mrs. James on the occasion of a surprise party given Mrs. Windsor on her 60th birthday. Mrs. Woodbury then read a poem written by Mrs. Windsor for a St. Patrick program given by the We and Our Neighbors club March 7, 1906.

Following these interesting verses, Mrs. T. A. Cutting recounted a series of personal anecdotes centering about Aunt Harriet, interesting to those who had not known her, as well as to former friends. In memory of the founder of the Guild, all joined in singing "Auld Lang Syne," led by Mrs. Grattan.

A very delightful feature of the entertainment were solo numbers sung by George Lanphear of Saratoga, grandson of Mrs. Mary Lanphear. He had chosen an Italian song, an English folk song, and "Sylvia" as an encore.

contrary to the contention they have made all along to the effect that the Senate would be better off looking after American interests at home, seeking to overcome the depression and restore normal conditions, than spending its time over international resolutions which have no important bearing on world affairs at this time.

At any rate, whichever way you look at it, the fact now becomes apparent that consideration of the World Court may be postponed until after another national election has rolled around.

Rehearsing for the Big Show

CLING PEACH
GRWERS MEET
WITH MOULTON

Sacramento, March 29—California cling peach growers, at a meeting with Dudley Moulton, director of the state department of agriculture, the first of the week, decided definitely and enthusiastically to proceed with the formation of the projected federation of peach growers.

An organization committee was chosen, contracts are being prepared, and definite steps are now under way to stabilize this industry. The organization of independent growers into one or more groups will be one of the first steps undertaken by the growers, and as soon as this work has been completed, the work of federating with existing cooperatives and contract growers will proceed.

The failure of the California Canning Peach Growers' association to enter into further negotiations toward formation of the proposed Federated Peach Growers will not halt plans of other growers, according to John Hale, chairman of the state-wide cling peach committee.

Mr. and Mrs. William Lange and son, James, of San Francisco, were visiting Dr. and Mrs. F. R. Anderson over the week-end.

He was accompanied by Mrs. Hanchett of the State Teachers college.

Mrs. John Keesman read two humorous selections, "A Yankee in Love," and "A Telephone Conversation."

Games appropriate to the day were played in the parlor under the direction of Mrs. G. E. Jeffers, and then refreshments were served in a unique way. Lunch boxes were arranged on a table with two strings attached, and the contents planned for the two who held the sham-locks at the loose ends. Tea and coffee were poured at small tables.

Lovely spring flowers in profusion decorated the rooms.

COUK VICTORIOUS
OVER KIDWARD
IN SCHOL VOTING

At the Campbell Union High School board election Friday, March 25, O. B. Couk defeated James Kidward, incumbent. The polls were crowded from 1 o'clock until closing time, and the voting was slow. Couk received 481 votes against 362 for Kidward.

Voting was light in the grammar school election, W. R. Porter and Lloyd Gardner being re-elected without contest.

KELLYS DEFEAT
CAMPBELL NINE
10 TO 4 SUNDAY

The Campbell baseball nine was defeated by the Kellys here last Sunday on errors. The score was 10-4. Musladin pitched the entire game, and he was good. The errors, however, were stacked against the local team.

The game was packed with thrills, and a record crowd witnessed the contest. Bonaccorso and McGarity did exceptionally good work in the field, and home runs, one after another, held the crowd interested. Boland was badly spiked in the first inning. Padilla hit Campbell's lone homer.

Mrs. Bachman
Entertains Bridge
Club Wednesday

Mrs. Julius Bachman entertained the members of her bridge club last Wednesday evening at her home on Everett avenue. Lovely spring blossoms added to the pleasantness of the evening. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess at two small tables. Mrs. Ethan Lanphear won the first prize and Mrs. Frank Anderson won the consolation prize.

Present were Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. Lanphear, Mrs. Earl Young, Mrs. Bert Young, Mrs. William Ohlen, Mrs. Horace Lea and Mrs. Richard Knappen.

THREE GOVERNORS
PLAN TO ATTEND
LIVERMORE RODEO

Livermore, March 29—Governors of Arizona and Nevada have been invited to share honors with Gov. Jas. Rolph, Jr., at the Livermore rodeo May 15 when the California executive will crown the cowboys who fight their way through to the championships, and present official congratulations from the state to Johnny Schneider, Livermore boy, who is cowboy champion of the world.

Governor Rolph has definitely announced that he will be here for the grand finals of the bronc riding and brama steer riding contests and President T. W. Norris of the Rodeo association expects Governor Geo. W. P. Hunt of Arizona and Governor Fred B. Balzar of Nevada to accept invitations to occupy the Governor's box with him.

While Rolph has been a regular visitor to the big cowboy show, it will be the first time that executives of other states have been here with him.

The members enjoyed a sumptuous turkey dinner at 6:30. Roll call ceremony revealed an attendance of over 100, and cards of regret from many more.

A session of the lodge was called at 8 o'clock, at which everyone was called upon to say a few words.

SEVERE INJURIES

W. D. Sturtevant of Johnson avenue was quite seriously injured last week while crossing the street at First and San Carlos in San Jose. As Mr. Sturtevant started across, a car, driven by a woman, made a right turn, the car-door handle catching in his sleeve, lacerating his arm and hurling him to the pavement. He suffered injuries about the face and forehead and bruises about the body.

Mr. Sturtevant is confined to his home, but is well on the road to recovery and able to see friends.

Tornadoes Kill Hundreds in Southern States—An Insurgent House Killed the Manufacturers' Sales Tax Provision of the Tax Bill.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SPRING tornadoes that swept across five southern states took a toll of more than three hundred lives and caused property damage that will not be estimated for a long time. Other hundreds of persons were injured and a great many were rendered homeless.

Alabama was the worst sufferer, the deaths in that state reaching a total of at least 246. Thirty-five were killed in Georgia, eighteen in Tennessee and two each in South Carolina and Kentucky. As communications were broken down over wide areas the lists may be enlarged later. To add to the distress a wave of unseasonably cold weather came, and farmers in the regions hardest hit faced the prospect of a planting season without implements, live stock or shelter.

The National Guard was called to the relief work in Alabama and tents, cots and blankets were hurriedly distributed to the sufferers, while welfare agencies collected food and clothing. Gov. B. M. Miller formally called on the people of the state to contribute to the relief of those in the storm areas and the Red Cross, of course, was on the job promptly. In Tuscaloosa and Talladega counties it was found necessary to establish militia patrols to prevent looting.

AN INSURGENT house killed the $600,000,000 general manufacturers' sales tax provisions of the billion dollar tax bill in one of the most spectacular sessions in years. It marked the revolt of both Democrats and Republicans from party leadership.

The sales tax section was knocked out of the bill by a vote of 223 to 153. Wild cheering by the anti-sales tax forces greeted the announcement.

Having adopted amendments boosting the individual income and estate taxes and having restored "double taxation" on companies with plants abroad—all estimated to yield around $100,000,000 in revenue in 1933—the house immediately took steps to raise the $500,000,000 necessary to fill the hole in the bill caused by killing of the sales tax.

In throwing out the sales tax section, the house under lash of insurgent Republicans and Democrats, led by Representative La Guardia (Rep.) of New York, and Representative Doughton (Dem.) of North Carolina, bowled over the regular leaders of both parties and overturned the program of its ways and means committee.

As a result of the action of the house in wrecking the tax bill, congress probably will have to adjourn, over the Republican and Democratic national conventions in June, returning in session to complete the legislative program.

Majority leader Henry T. Rainey (Dem., Ill.) said after adjournment: "The house has rejected the Democratic bill and now is compelled to turn to the Republican bill proposed by the treasury in order to balance the budget. It will be necessary to provide for more than $500,000,000 of revenue to take the place of the sales tax."

OVER on the senate side there had grown a group known as the "ten per centers" who, under the leadership of McKellar of Tennessee, undertook to do things in the way of government economy. This group is already so large that it dominates the senate and on Tuesday that body by a vote of 50 to 29 sent back to the committee on appropriations the $124,000,000 state, justice, labor and commerce appropriation bill for a mandatory cut of 10 per cent. Chairman Jones of the committee, who opposed the move, said he would take this as a mandate to make similar cuts in all the supply bills. Senator McKellar thought it would result in a saving of at least $25,000,000 to the government. Appropriations for interest on the public debt or payments to war veterans, which together amount to more than $1,000,000,000, alone are to be exempted.

FOES of prohibition in the senate are following the example set by the wets in the house and paying the way to obtain a record vote, and the dry senators say they can have it. On behalf of the wets Senator Tydings of Maryland offered a motion to discharge the judiciary committee from further consideration of resolutions for repeal or amendment of the Eighteenth amendment, and in support of this he presented a petition signed by twenty-four members. Wishing to give others a chance to sign, Mr. Tydings said he would not press his motion until March 31. Under the senate rules the petition is unnecessary. Senator Watson of Indiana, the Republican leader, signed it with the understanding that this did not commit him to a wet position. The other signers were 12 Republicans and 11 Democrats.

MAYOR FRANK MURPHY of Detroit announced last Thursday his plans to have the city of Detroit stop paying interest on the $400,000,000 debts owed by the city. The announcement was made following a long telephone conversation with Senator James Couzens, who was said to have approved the plan.

REPRESENTATIVE ROYAL C. Johnson of South Dakota, a Republican who used to be a dry, went to the White House the other day to discuss legislative matters with President Hoover, and in the course of their conversation he told the Chief Executive he believed the people had a right to another vote on the prohibition question. Leaving the conference, Mr. Johnson said to the correspondents that less than 25 per cent of the voters of the country had had an opportunity to register their views on the national wet and dry question. He said that census bureau officials had told him that 20,000,000 Americans had reached voting age since the Eighteenth amendment was adopted.

R. C. Johnson

"In addition," Mr. Johnson said, "there are the 4,000,000 veterans of the World war who did not have a chance to vote on prohibition. The women never have had an opportunity to express their views through the ballot. This is a democracy and the people of this country are entitled to a referendum on prohibition." The Johnson expression of opinion came at a time when renewed pressure is being brought on the White House by wet Republican leaders to influence President Hoover to agree to the insertion of a wet plank in the Republican platform.

HOPE for the safe return of Colonel Lindbergh's kidnaped baby revived with the entry into the case of H. Wallace Caldwell of Chicago, a real estate man and member of the board of education. He made several hasty trips to Hopewell to confer with the colonel and, while refusing to make public his plans, told the press: "I possessed such information as I believed would be of value, and I turned it over to the family. The situation is extremely critical, and I desire to give every possible assistance."

Mr. Caldwell was believed to be acting for the "Secret Six," anti-crime group of Chicago, but this he would not admit. He is a wealthy man and is interested in crime solution in an amateur way, and was thought to have obtained his information concerning the Lindbergh case by chance. The circumstances led to the belief that developments in the matter might be expected in Chicago.

J. W. DULANTY, high commissioner for the Irish Free State in London, notified J. H. Thomas, British secretary for the dominions, that President Eamon de Valera intends to abolish the oath of allegiance to King George, which is taken by members of the Irish parliament, believing the Irish people made this mandatory by their vote at the recent election Mr. Thomas told parliament he had "grave information from the Free State, but did not present the details. Instead he went to Buckingham palace and conferred with the king for forty minutes and then joined the cabinet which took up the matter."

Mr. Thomas then returned to the house of commons and announced that the government was determined that the Free State should not abolish the oath of allegiance, and had sent word to Dublin making the British standpoint "clear beyond the possibility of a doubt." He said the same stand was taken regarding the land annuities.

President De Valera had declared

he would also abolish the land annuities, which amount to about $10,150,000 and on which Ireland now owes the British government $390,000,000. These annuities consist of money advanced by the British government to enable Irish farmers to buy holdings from landlords on a 60 year purchase scheme.

DOLPH HITLER wasn't being given much chance in his attempt to win the German Presidency from Paul von Hindenburg. He was refused the privilege of broadcasting his speeches, and then thirty Nazi newspapers and periodicals were prohibited from publishing because, it was alleged, they were endangering the republic by their attacks on the government. They had printed Hitler's proclamation denouncing the raids made by the Prussian police on 160 Nazi offices. Political feeling in Germany was running high and the course taken by the government was not winning it any more friends.

PEACE prospects in the Orient grew brighter during the week, though there was a chance there would be further fighting before an agreement was reached by Japan and China. Parleys were proceeding quite nicely when Gen. Chiang Kuang-nai, representing the Chinese government, walked out of the conference insulted because the Japanese representative was Gen. Kenkichi Ueda, his inferior in rank, instead of Gen. Yoshinori Shirakawa. The interruption was believed to be only temporary and the negotiators, including neutral foreign diplomats, continued hopeful.

However, it was reported that the Japanese, instead of preparing to withdraw from the Shanghai area, were digging new trenches and erecting new barbed-wire entanglements, and there was complaint of the acts of their scouting planes. For their part, the Japanese accused the Chinese of trying to advance into the zone of occupation, and said they were prepared to take strong measures to prevent this.

The revolt in the new Manchurian state was growing daily in strength and there were many fights between Japanese troops and the Chinese whom they call bandits. The latter are under command of Tsing Hai, war lord of Kirin province on the Soviet border who captured the city of Fu Yu.

THAT the power question will be a major issue in the Presidential campaign is the substance of a declaration signed by fifteen senators and twenty-two representatives, and they assert that the "power trust" is trying to influence the selection of candidates.

The statement, with the names of the signers, appeared on the frontispiece of a booklet issued by Judson King, director of the National Popular Government league, giving an analysis of the power stands of Presidential candidates. The signers included: Senators Johnson, Norris, Nye, Frazier, Brookhart, Cutting and Howell, Republicans; Walsh of Montana, Wheeler, McKellar, Costigan, Dill, Gore and Long, Democrats, and Shipstead, Farmer-Labor.

The analysis of the Presidential candidates, which was not included in the section endorsed by the legislators, described President Hoover as a "power-trust President"; classed Governor Ritchie of Maryland and Newton D. Baker as also on the "power trust" side, termed Alfred E. Smith as on middle ground and listed Speaker Garner and Franklin D. Roosevelt on the "public interest" side.

IOWA'S Republican convention elected twenty-five Hoover delegates to the national convention and pledged the support of the Republicans of the state to the President. Elsewhere in the Middle West the anti-Hoover Republicans were more active. In Illinois they were preparing to put up slates of candidates for delegates who will oppose the candidacy of Mr. Hoover or of any man who is not in favor of repeal of the Eighteenth amendment and the reduction of cost of government so as to lower taxes. The leadership of this group, especially in Chicago, however, is not of a character to enhance their chances of success.

TWO house committees, those on appropriations and on economy, are taking great interest in the movement to close up or curtail the activities of surplus shore properties of the navy.

Seven stations now are under congressional fire. Whether they are closed or placed on a less expensive basis depends largely upon the question of whether the congressional desire for economy is stronger than its desire to cling to its pork barrel stations and yards.

The properties under discussion include: The Boston navy yard, the Charleston navy yard, the Portsmouth (N. H.) navy yard, the naval stations at Key West and New Orleans, the ammunition depot at Baldwin, L. I., and the Newport naval training station.

It is estimated that curtailing activities at these stations eventually would result in annual savings amounting to several million dollars. Appropriations for new construction also would be avoided.

KIWANIS NOTES By Heck

Closed meeting today at Kiwanis and matters of local club and community interests were discussed. The subject of Scout camp and club house were discussed, with committees appointed to take charge. Beautification of streets and properties was discussed from various angles and recommendations made by members of that committee.

Modern poetry will be the topic of next meeting, with Rev. W. L. Bone as speaker. Rev. A. S. Buell will be the chairman, presiding elder, moderator, and what-have-you.

The Campbell club still boasts 100 per cent attendance since Jan. 1, and a number of visitors from Los Gatos and San Jose clubs were in attendance to make good for their percentages.

Two Expense Accounts of English Statesmen

There is a tradition that elections in the "bad old days" were fantastically expensive. But many candidates may think enviously of the days when a candidate could do the thing as cheaply as Mr. Harrington, of Kelston, member for Bath in the year 1646, writes a columnist in the Manchester (England) Guardian. There exists a record of his experiences and expenditure. "Thursday, December 31, went to Bath.—Dined at the George Inn, with the mayor and four citizens; spent at dinner six shillings (about $1.50) in wine.

Laid out in victuals at the George inn 11-4
Laid out in drinking 7-2
Laid out in tobacco and drinking-vessels 4-4
January 1.—My father gave me four pounds (about $20) for my expenses at Bath."

He did not actually need so much, for there is a summary. "Note—I gave the city messenger two shillings for bearing the mayor's letter to me. Laid out in all, three pounds seven shillings for victuals, drink, and horse hire, together with divers gifts."

That expenses in the county of Somerset rose considerably as time went on may be judged from that record of "charges for one day's expenses at a small pot-house at Ilchester in the contest for the county of Somerset in 1813." Seven hundred and ninety-two dinners, 353 bottles of rum and gin, 57 bottles of French brandy, and 514 gallons of beer were given at a total of £304 17s 2d.

Monument Records Deed of Cross-Eyed Heroine

A cross-eyed woman has been honored by a monument at Hartwell, Ga.

Nancy Hart, whose memory is thus preserved, and her husband built a cabin in the hills, and were rearing a family when the Revolutionary war broke out.

While the men were away five redcoats surprised Nancy and a little girl in the cabin and ordered the woman to prepare a meal for them. Nancy, watching for an opportunity, grabbed one of the muskets and killed one of the soldiers. She then seized another gun and threatened to shoot any of the four that made resistance.

Because of her crossed eyes, none of King George's men could tell which one Nancy was looking at, so they all stood still until the men came back to see what all the shooting was for, and hanged the four soldiers. Subsequently the town of Hartwell and Hart county of which it is the county seat, were named for the cross-eyed heroine.

Congress voted a fund for the erection of a monument to Nancy Hart.

Barefooted Footballer

The director of athletics at Oregon State college says that in the game between Oregon State college and New York university in 1923 Henry Hughes, an Hawaiian boy from Honolulu, playing right half-back on the Oregon team, was a barefooted kicker. He punted and place-kicked equally well in bare feet, but only kicked barefooted rarely in games. When he wanted to make a place-kick sure, he simply took off his shoe and stocking and kicked the ball. He was much more accurate and got greater distance out of kicks that way.

Translation

It was their first day in a military camp and the two colored recruits were sitting in the kitchen more or less industriously removing the skins from potatoes.

"Huccum," demanded the first, "huccum dat officer keeps callin' us K. P.—K. P.?"

"Hesh you' mouf, iggorance," advised the second. "Dat am de abbreviation fo' 'Keep peelin'—keep peelin'."

Beauty of Waxed Floors

There is nothing like wax for finishing wooden floors. When the boards have been stained and the pores filled with a filler, floor wax can be spread over them and polished to a satin surface, which can be repaired at any time without removing the furniture. Wax allows the wood to mellow as it ages and each additional application of it adds to a slow growing beauty that improves with time.

Sociable Birds

The weaver birds found in the warmer parts of Asia, Africa and Australia are a sociable lot. They weave vegetable fibers around the branch of a tree to form a sort of thatched roof beneath which as many as 300 birds make their nests. Year after year they make new nests under the same shelter until the tree branch breaks and a new dwelling place must be started.

Wise Conduct

Our laws compel merchants to give honest weight and full measure. But the wise merchant needs no such laws—he gives these as a matter of honesty and fair-dealing. The wise worker is as the wise merchant—he gives full value as a matter of principle.—Grit.

Age Not Mere Matter of Passage of Years

It is an old saying that a woman is as old as she looks and a man is as old as he feels. Women who take an interest in life never look old, being full of quietude and animation, and men who take an interest in life never feel old for the same reason. Actually, age is more a matter of mind than body, for a swift, flying mind keeps the body young, whereas a swift, flying body won't keep the mind young unless the wits are exercised and the pleasant emotions of life given full play.

If anyone disbelieves me, I merely point to the life statistics of insurance companies, which prove that a country clergyman has a far better expectation of life than the most highly exercised physical training instructor. The country clergyman leads a quiet, useful life, takes a deep interest in his fellow creatures, has a good conscience, and exercises his mind. The physical training instructor may have an equally good conscience but he concentrates on the exercise of his body; with the passing of years his wits begin to creak and suddenly he finds himself an old man in spite of all those long-arm balances and somersaults.

In short, if your years number eighty and you still want to live forever, you are young. If your years number twenty-five and you wouldn't care if you were bumped off tomorrow, you are old.—London Tilt-Bits.

No Law Forbidding the Holding of Two Offices

It would not be illegal or unconstitutional for a person to fill two posts in the President's cabinet at the same time, says Pathfinder Magazine. In fact, during the early days of the Republic, it was not uncommon for a cabinet officer to act temporarily as head of an executive department other than his own. For instance, James Monroe served for a time in President Madison's cabinet as both secretary of war and secretary of state. John Marshall was chief justice of the Supreme court and secretary of state at the same time. He was secretary of state under President Adams when he was appointed chief justice and the President authorized him to continue his duties as secretary of state until Jefferson's inauguration a month later. That is the only time that the two highest appointive offices of the federal government have been filled by one man at the same time. Legally Marshall could have drawn salaries for both positions, but he refused to accept more than one and his salary as secretary of state remained unpaid.

More Overproduction

Tall stories from Florida are pretty thick (in more ways than one) but this one from the Sanford (Fla.) Herald, deserves repetition: "The soil around Sanford is so fertile the other day a fellow dropped his corn cob pipe in the sand. Before he could pick it up it had sprouted and by the time he got it in his mouth he was eating roasting ears."

Matching this, an Edmonton (Mich.) farmer claims to have grown two cabbages so large "that a stump puller had to be used to pull them, while a tractor dragged them to the house."—Exchange.

Citizenship

"The Constitution of the United States of America," a book published by the government, says on the subject of a person being a citizen of a state without being a United States citizen: "Citizenship in a state is distinct and may be separately acquired. A resident of the District of Columbia may be a citizen of the United States but not a citizen of any state, and it would seem that one might be a citizen of a state without being a citizen of the United States, although the authorities differ on this point."

Spiders Unable to Fly

No species of spider has wings and therefore no member of this insect-like family of creatures can fly in the generally accepted sense of that term as applied to animals, birds and insects, says Pathfinder Magazine. Sometimes, however, spiders which travel through the air by clinging to pieces of floating web are called flying spiders. Under favorable conditions a young spider climbs upon an elevated object and emits a web which is caught up and carried away by the wind, bearing the spider along with it through the air.

To Help Humanity

The Rockefeller Foundation is a philanthropic trust, incorporated by act of New York legislation of May 14, 1913. The purpose is "to promote the well being of mankind throughout the world" through charitable, religious, missionary and educational activities, as well as through research and publications. The foundation offers fellowships in graduate medicine and public health. In granting the Rockefeller fellowships individual cases are dealt with, as there is no established system of granting them and no public announcement is made.

REGULAR MEET OF GRANGE TUESDAY

A regular meeting of the Orchard City Grange was held last Tuesday evening and many reports were heard at this time. M. E. Purmort, Joseph McKinnon, W. H. Crothers, and Louis Shelley gave reports on the poultry situation; William Coupland spoke on farm and orchard; S. N. Hedegard and C. H. Whitman gave reports on co-operation, and H. G. Keesling on education.

Joseph Bohnett, past master of the Grange, was not present at this meeting, and as his 84th birthday was a few days later, members at this time planned to send him greeting cards. "Uncle Joe" is the oldest member of the Grange, and expects to be in attendance past masters' night, which will be observed next meeting, Apr. 12.

Local Author Praised By Critics

Mrs. Alexandra Mazurova George's story, "The Hen," which appeared in the February Midland, has received high praise from the critics. Mrs. George tells the story of the trials, hopes and fears of maternity through the medium of a broody hen. The story is told with much detail, and yet quite simply and with a hint of tragedy.

Books: Trotsky; Collecting

The following review of Trotsky's History of the Revolution, and the notes on the American public as book-collectors is herewith reprinted from THE FORTNIGHTLY magazine for the benefit of our bookish readers, through permission of the publishers. —Ed.

THE HISTORY OF THE RUSSIAN REVOLU-TION. Volume I: The Overthrow of Tsarism,
by Leon Trotsky; translated by Max Eastman;
Simon and Schuster.

Among his party cohorts, Trotsky was thought of as a literary man. During the decade before the Russian revolution he was considered one of the finest orators,
one of the best writers, and one of the leading thinkers in the revolutionary factions. This may be a surprise to outsiders, who have known him mainly as the military whip of the Bolshevik party
—Lenin's "big stick."

It will be no surprise after reading this history. Trotsky's military fame was somewhat accidental. That is, his great success as commander of the Red armies sent his more private abilities into eclipse. He was the Bolshevik whip because of his genius at organization and at handling men—not because of brilliance in war technique.

A victim of circumstances and—so we are led to believe by other exiles—conspiracy, he is now an outcast from the state he helped create. But his exile is a fortunate circumstance at least in this:
that it enabled him to write an excellent history from a sound Marxian standpoint.

Trotsky makes no claim to being unbiased. "The serious and critical reader will not want a treacherous impartiality," he contends, in the preface, "which offers him a cup of conciliation with a well-settled poison of reactionary hate
at the bottom, but a scientific consciousness, which . . . seeks support in an honest study of the facts . . . This is the only possible historic objectivism."
At the same time, he feels it necessary to submerge his own part in the revolution,
even referring to himself in the third person, since "the subjective tone, inevitable in autobiographies or memoirs, is not permissible in a work of history."

The Russian revolution was a mass uprising, he believes. It was not the handicraft of the Bolshevik party, or of Lenin, or of any other single faction or influence. It was the result of an extensive revolutionary process, co-existent in all countries and all civilized races. In Russia it achieved its immediate goal—
the overthrow of autocracy—sooner than in other countries because of the weakness of the governing classes and the preparedness of the proletariat. Lenin and the Bolsheviks were responsible for this preparedness, but they did not inspire the revolution.

In presenting this thesis, Trotsky is not trying to detract from Lenin's or the party's importance. "Lenin was not a demurge of the revolutionary process," he explains; "he merely entered into a chain of objective historic forces. But he was a great link in that chain." Lenin was not the creative genius of the party, but its most complete expression. He was not "an accidental element in the historic development, but a product of the whole past of Russian history." Without him the revolutionary elements might not have come to a head so directly, but the eventual result would have been the same. He undoubtedly exerted a tremendous personal influence on the course of events, but only as a leader and teacher.

One curious fact is presented in this history—Trotsky explains that Lenin and the other socialist leaders did not expect an early socialist revolution in Russia—almost were not ready for it. They anticipated a bourgeois revolution with its downfall of tsarism. But "Russia is a peasant country, one of the most backward of European countries. Here socialism cannot immediately conquer." Thus wrote Lenin from Switzerland in the pre-revolutionary days of his exile. Lenin thought that the Russian bourgeois revolution would give a stimulus to a socialist revolution in the more advanced European countries, and ultimately drag Russia into its whirlpool. It was not until the February revolution had been accomplished, and the Provisional Government set up, that Lenin changed his views and began preparing the party for the subsequent victory of the proletariat.

This later uprising is not recounted in this volume, which is only the first half of the entire History. In this book Trotsky takes up the historic background
of the revolution, to show the inevitable doom of tsarism. Then he relates the awakening of the peasantry, the first spasmodic twitches of revolt, the rise of the several revolutionary factions—Bolshevik, Menshevik, Social-Revolutionary, and minor groups—and their joint triumph in the February revolt. The first precarious months under the Provisional Government are told, with the gradually growing influence of the Bolshevik party.

I shall await with great interest the appearance of the second volume of this history next fall. It will deal with the period of Trotsky's own chief participation, (he was in exile until two months after the February revolution) and will contain a discussion of his theory of Permanent Revolution. W. G. F.

When Thomas Frognall Dibdin wrote his numerous and lengthy works, he addressed himself almost exclusively to a chosen few who had the desire, leisure, and money to collect books. One hundred years later Dr. Rosenbach wrote a series of articles on book-collecting. They were published in the Saturday Evening Post
Book collecting in the Golden Age (1924-29) had ceased to be the sport of kings and princelings; it had become the hobby of industrial America. With such admirable magazine and newspaper publicity, it was not surprising that the world suddenly became old book conscious.

When the morning papers reported an auction sale of some Bible for several thousand dollars, readers rushed to their bookshelves, ransacked old trunks and corners of garrets for "that old Bible
we had." When successful, triumphantly they would place their "pearl" in the hands of some local dealer with a magnanimous offer to part with it for "half the auction price."

Their Bible is usually "very old," and some add, as though it were a further inducement, "very dilapidated." My experience has been that the "pearl" usually lacks a binding, perhaps a title page, nearly always several leaves, and is dated 1820 or thereabouts. The earlier the date, the higher the price. In the eyes of the would-be seller, if his book happens to be in Dutch, German or Danish, its interest and value are greatly enhanced. It is a book-seller's unpleasant task to disillusion.

Age may indicate rarity, but not always value. There were thousands of books published in the beginning of the Sixteenth century that are practically worthless, but try and tell this to the proud possessor of a tome dated 1512!
He won't believe you. —DAVID MAGEE

A RESERVOIR reduces Irrigating costs

Successful California farmers always prepare for irrigation during the spring and summer growing season, regardless of winter rainfall.

They know that, when irrigating, it is necessary to apply water to the soil as quickly as possible in order to keep labor costs at a minimum and to provide sufficient water exactly when needed by the crop.

As a practical means to this end, many farmers are using irrigation reservoirs. This system offers a compromise between the large pumping unit with its higher cost of operation and the small pumping unit with its costly waste of time.

Why the Irrigation Reservoir Saves Money

It gives 1,000 Gallons Per Minute with only a 500 GMP pump installation.

It permits rapid irrigating during the day, and night
irrigating is eliminated; the small pump refills the reservoir during the night.

A small pumping unit running 24 hours a day is more economical than a large unit operating but 12 hours a day.

If you are interested in reducing irrigating costs, the irrigation reservoir may be the solution. Before changing your present pumping system, consult our Rural Power Representative. With the information he has at hand, he can help you work out estimates of possible savings. If the reservoir is advisable on your farm, he can recommend the best procedure for its construction.
